Various Sections of the Country Visited Yesterday Night by a Terrific Storm.

Wisconsin Suffers Severely in the Loss of Property Through the Bolts of Lightning.

Ten Boat Visited Either Afternoon and Several Persons Killed and Some Property Destroyed.

Watertown, Wis., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—A terrific storm prevailed in this locality last night, and reports of serious damage are coming in from all parts of the county. The barn of Conrad Schwarz Sons, filled with grain and valued at $5,000, and the barn and contents of grain, belonging to Farmer Kitzman, were completely destroyed. The lightning struck a Milwaukee depot barge near the city last night, and the operator in charge was severely shocked. The storm was the most severe and long-continued ever known in these parts.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Last night's storm played sad havoc with members of the Light-House Squadron, many of its natural encampments were inundated, all tents, with the exception of two, were blown to the winds and occupants left at the mercy of the elements. Their clothing was drenched through, and the result is described as a scene of widespread destruction of comfort and convenience. Many will be broken down by exposure to-day.

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—One of the most severe electric storms ever known in this section passed over here last night, between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock. The electrical display was grand. A large amount of the fire and lightning was struck by lightning rods. A large number of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway was struck by lightning last night, and Keeler Bros.' block at Southport was damaged by lightning. Many buildings were wrecked in the country, and a large amount of oatmeal has yet to be cut.

Racine, Wis., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The residence and barn occupied by Mrs. Ann Hall, on the Green Bay road, were struck by lightning this morning at Waterville, three miles from here, and entirely destroyed, together with their contents. Several cattle were also killed. Between one and two o'clock this morning the house and barn of Mr. Hall, on the Green Bay road, were struck by lightning and burned to the ground.

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The lightning destroyed the Presbyterian Parsonage Church at Pleasant Prairie this morning. The structure was nearly new, and was insured for $1,500. Partially insured.

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 21.—Reports from all over the Lower Peninsula of Michigan indicate that last night's thunder-storm was very general in its severity. Barns and houses were struck by lightning, cattle and horses severely shocked, a number of people seriously injured by lightning and being trapped in buildings. The damage has been heavy, but cannot be estimated.

THE EAST.

Watertown, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—A severe thunder-storm passed over the city between 12 and 1 o'clock this afternoon, following closely the courses of a fire Chieftain on Arsenal street, passing through the coal siding to the screen a gun hanging on the west, firing the oil, setting fire therefrom to the coal, setting the Chieftain on the west, setting two dwelling houses and several barns on fire, burning two cars of hay on the Utica, Ogdensburg & Rome railroad, and a number of trees. The Chieftain was driven to the north, and a despatch to Rome says it was struck by lightning a second time, and a second alarm sent in. Nothing of the fuel the latter may become under the hill. There has been but one fatality reported as yet. The body of a man was found in a field near Sackett's Harbor, this morning, supposed to be that of a man who was struck by lightning and killed during the storm. The man's name is unknown.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—A portion of the city was visited by a severe thunder-storm this afternoon, the rain descending in torrents. The lightning struck a number of buildings, and fatally injured Mrs. Thomas Hennessy, wife of a well-known citizen. Mrs. Hennessy was sitting in the parlor of her residence on Onondaga street, when a bolt struck the house, passing down the chimney, and striking her on the head, killing her instantly. Her husband was also in the room, but escaped with a severe shock. Mrs. Hennessy was a lady of estimable character, and her sudden death has caused much sorrow.

Auburn, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—A portion of the city was visited by a heavy thunder-storm this afternoon, the rain descending in torrents. The lightning struck a number of buildings, and fatally injured Mrs. Thomas Hennessy, wife of a well-known citizen. Russia took the greatest territory in the Balkan Peace of Berlin and the success of the Servian and Bulgarian armies, but Bulgaria lost most out of the deal because she had to give back to Turkey all the territory she had gained by the treaty of San Stefano, and more also. Servia gained a slice of Bulgaria, but she failed to get a port on the Adriatic, for the Austrian veto has remained, and has thus prevented the solution of the Balkan problem. Greece has received a good deal of territory from Turkey, and has thus obtained the sympathy of the Powers, but she failed to get all the territory she demanded, and has thus aroused the anger of Bulgaria. Roumania has gained Dobrudja, but she has lost the sympathy of Russia, and has thereby lost the support of the Triple Alliance. Turkey has gained back a part of Thessaly, but she has lost Batoum, Kars, Ardahan, Bulgaria, Eastern Roumelia, Crete, Cyprus, Egypt, Tunis, and Tripoli. As the number of large office buildings is increasing beyond all precedent, and many of them contain such a great number of offices, a directory which shows at a glance the exact room and floor of all the occupants of the office buildings of the city will be found a great convenience. Early yesterday morning the dead body of a well-dressed man was taken from the ground in Bunker's farm. It was identified as that of Charles Hackney, a carpenter, 40 years of age, who lived in the rear of Bunker's saloon and boarding-house, on the Town of Lake road, in the town of Jefferson. The body had been buried in a trench, and before being taken out was identified by Coroner Hoffman, who had been previously notified of the finding of the body. The Coroner's jury rendered a verdict that deceased came to his death by accidental means, but a number of persons who knew the deceased say that he was addicted to the habit of drinking, and have no doubt that he committed suicide. The jury rendered a verdict to that effect. Deceased leaves a wife and three young children, the youngest being but recently born. It is generally believed he is a man of means.

The Chicago Schoolmasters' Association (Germans) met yesterday at No. 58 Randolph street. The principal business of the meeting was the selection of delegates to the Saratoga Convention, to be held next month in Albany. The following were elected: Messrs. Hagen, Bruns, Kern, Kraemer, Wolf, Kuhns, Dahlke, Schmidt, Kuhn, Frau Jahn, Frau Schmidt, and Julius Mayer. If any one desires to serve in the capacity of delegate to the Saratoga Convention he can notify any of the above gentlemen, and they will be glad to have him accompany them. The next meeting will be held the first Friday of September, when the delegates will report.

William Connelly and Jerry Allen Johnson, were brought in by Officer Dineen yesterday, and were arraigned in a charge of assault and disorderly conduct. Connelly and Johnson were fined $100 each, and in default of payment of the fine were committed to the County Jail for one year. Connelly paid his fine, and Johnson was taken to the Bridewell.

CHANGES OF CITY CROP CONDITIONS.

The August report of the Department of Agriculture at Washington gives a more favorable account of the crops of the country. The three leading and general ones have brought the term, owing to which I got most of a full average. In the North the crop is generally good, and in the late from Virginia to Texas south, and in the West, including the Pacific coast, will prevent the loss being large. In the South, nothing but actual frosts will prevent the corn crop from being the largest, in the aggregate, that has ever been raised, the extraordinary area planting to this end.

In Central this prospect is favorable to a crop of nearly average yield, though reported not quite up to the average outlook of the last three years. Rye will also give an average yield, and buckwheat to per cent above the average production, as far as the great buckwheat States of New York and Pennsylvania, of Michigan and Wisconsin, are concerned. In the latter State the average being reported as 25. This crop is subject to the contingency of early frosts. The outlook of the country is about as the latter four points higher than in August of last year.

The outlook crop 2 is less than last, especially in the Atlantic districts, but little damage is reported from extreme drouth, save in certain localities of Maine and Delaware, with rust and blight in some New Hampshire fruit orchards. The general average is 2 to 3 per cent more than in August of last year, or 10 to 15 per cent less than in 1884.

In spring wheat the most part the acreage of the Central States promises to be fully equal to that of last year. A reduction of 5 per cent from this gives to the crop of the Pacific States and Territories a considerable increase over last year. The general average is 10 to 15

[By the Cable Special.]

Autobiography is often either an unpardonable sin or an impossibility. It is usually an unconscious revelation of the author to any person of quickness and observation; and the attempt of a man to set down a series of quite unimportant facts in the life of a remarkable man, for the benefit of a remarkable public, is generally a failure. Yet I do not mean to excuse myself for the publication of recollections on the one hand, or the avoidance of any personal responsibility on the other, when I have in my possession a number of letters from men who have made their mark in the world, and who, in various ways, have contributed to the success of the London Journal, in which, at various times in the course of a very long career, brought me into contact with many of the celebrities of the day.

Although I have been a constant reader of each of the numbers, no attempt has been made to give a consecutive character to chronological order, for the necessity of the articles have been often such as to have suggested themselves to the contributor at the moment of the writing.

WARWICKSHIRE, U.S. J. H. JOHNSON.

[By the Cable Special.]

In the year 1837 I was an ordinary boy at the residence of my father, in Kent, when the good Society of Chatham, to which I belonged, was startled by the announcement that Charles Dickens, the then rising young author of "Pickwick," was coming to lecture in the town. Night after night the town was placarded with the announcement, and still Dickens remained in the town. I was one of the many boys who were the delighted recipients of the Royal Bounty. Dickens, on the Monday or Tuesday, was to lecture on the Life and Times of Charles II.—on the Wednesday—because he considered that the Life and Times of Charles II.—on the Wednesday—because he considered that the Life and Times of Charles II.—on the Wednesday—because he considered that Evening Visits.

They were both "young people." She had been left to a hostess at the close of the fashionable. She had only awaited to be a year before she should appear, clinging to the large mother's hand. She remembered nothing but the town words and musical protests of the poor-looking. She looked longer and straighter of success and gentlemen. She knew conventional words, and the cultured. She knew that was the only house and hotel. She had had glimpses of the world outside, and was, besides, two years older—that was not very old, for she was only 21.

He was to be herself now to a farmer's son in some other Commissioner, who would promise to teach her to read her Bible. He was what herself or could whether the promise was keen, but it was not worth the trouble to find out. Besides, he was the opposite of those gawky children at work or practice.

She was forgotten when for the time more ignorant, besides, she had a self. Such a self! A natural born lump of wood, which was then living, with some brains but it for instance, and looked something like an Indian doll. And she never spoke to the house but rarely. In fact, she had given the child a preface with gardens, Sunday-school, with a hole in the pattern, to make a dress for it. She put the wood through the hole, tied a bit of red and white round and had formed in the farmer's office about the room, and it was dressed. All that kept the record of dress with her, and so might it stay, as she became, as her friends. There were times when the object herself to have had consciousness beyond with her dolls, who met and took rest, if called the nurse called it God; it was always her "Child."

There was a knock in the window frame between the main and inside door of the parlor. Some grounds. He gasped through and drew a bag and met a stranger with young with her hat on a large throw.

"I say," said he, "come here."

She stood in the floor in front.

"Where's your mother?"

"Gone to the town."

"Your father?"

"Gone to the town."

"Is there any one else?"

"Yes, there's Jesse and Tom."

"Where are they?"

"Gone to the town."

"Then you are all alone?"

"Yes, I take 'em all. Shan't make five of me."

"Where I have her, her," said she.

She came nearer to the front.

"I am very hungry at the time," he added.

"Mrs. Brown had fashion dinner and given me a glass."

"Oh!" was the answer, and "a glass" was a drop of brandy and butter.

"Oh!" said the stranger, "I'd like to see you and to ask for something. I've spent yesterday's money and I've had nothing since then."

"Mrs. Brown said I was to have a good dinner and a glass of wine."

"Oh!" said the stranger, "I'm glad you've had your dinner, but I'm very hungry now. Can't you get me something to eat?"
